

WILD STORY BASED ON WHAT IS ONLY A HALF TRUTH

George Halverson is trying his law suits in the newspapers. In fact he is trying his suits before he files them in court. Last Saturday afternoon, George Halverson called on William Glasmann, president of the Ogdan River Reservoir company, and demanded that Mr. Glasmann pay $417 rental, which the American Construction Co. had against William Doyle for the use of machinery at the dam site. Mr. Glasmann refused to do anything of the kind. He told Mr. Halverson if he would get an order from Mr. Doyle he would pay it. Mr. Glasmann would pay it so long as Mr. Doyle had any money coming. Mr. Halverson then said he would bring suit to replevy the machinery and take it from Mr. Doyle, but instead of doing that Mr. Halverson sent a man by the name of Stubbins to the dam site with instructions to take possession of the machinery. After having done this, Mr. Halverson telephoned to the Ogdan Examiner something like this:

"Put in a great big scare head and tell the people Glasmann is in more trouble at the dam."

And then Mr. Halverson recited that the American Construction company, for whom he is attorney, had filed a lien six months ago for $29,400 and that Mr. Glasmann discharged a man by the name of Parker and he refuses to pay Doyle rental, etc. etc.

Accordingly the Examiner wrote up a story to the effect that Glasmann is in more trouble. It magnifies the story by stating that Glasmann went to Stubbins' camp and got a shot gun. Mr. Glasmann said before he left for the dam this morning.

Yesterday was Sunday and Mr. Doyle came down and work was suspended, except at the pumping plant. Sunday morning Mr. Tracy, who is bookkeeper at the dam, telephoned that a man by the name of Stubbins was going around slyly doing something to the machinery. I took Mr. Doyle up to the dam immediately and ordered Mr. Stubbins off the grounds. Nobody objected to Mr. Doyle starting up the machinery again and he went to work at once. Somebody had broken into my tent and had stolen a shotgun, ammunition and a bottle of brandy. When I entered Stubbins' camp I found my shotgun there and I picked it up and walked away with it. Mr. Stubbins confessed that he had taken the shotgun from my tent, fearing some other fellow might steal it. I told him he had no right to enter my tent and that I would have him arrested for burglarizing the same. That was all there was to the gun story.

"Nobody protested against Mr. Doyle taking charge of the machinery and going to work at once. Doyle is under contract to do the work at the dam and furnish his own machinery. I was present when he rented the machinery from the American Construction company and that company told him to take anything he wanted, and a reasonable rental was all that was asked. I was present when the contract was made. Within ten days after Mr. Doyle started up the machinery a bill was presented for $417. The whole outfit was not worth that much and I do not blame Mr. Doyle for refusing to pay it. Mr. Doyle stated that he would submit the matter to arbitration and pay whatever the arbitrators decided on. This machinery, however, was left there one year ago by the officers of the American Construction company who refused to continue their contract. The machinery was in the road. Mr. Doyle would either have to tear it down and throw it away or use it. He spent more money repairing the machinery than the rental price is worth. I do not consider that Mr. Doyle owes anything, but he is willing to pay whatever two disinterested men will say it is worth."

It will be noticed that Mr. Halverson is eager to have it appear that Mr. Glasmann "gets into more trouble" to the effect that Mr. Glasmann is a very troublesome fellow.

A TRIBUTE TO THE LATE HORACE PEERY

Horace Eldredge Peery, third son of David Harold Peery, and Elizabeth Higginbotham Peery, was born at Ogdan, November 18, 1873, and died at Porterville, Cal., October 2, 1913.

His early education was obtained in the Ogdan schools. When a young man he graduated from the commercial department at Foughkeepie, N. Y., after which he returned to Ogdan where for a while he worked in the office of Fred J. Kiesel & Co. He then became secretary of the Ogdan Milling & Elevator Co.

For a number of years he had a valuable training in business, under his able father, as agent. Like his father, he had an aptitude for mathematics and business and in the year 1896 he started in the milling business with his brother, Joseph S. Peery, under the firm name of Peery Brothers Milling company. They worked up a good business and in 1900 Joseph left the business and was succeeded in the partnership by Harold J. Peery. The business continued to grow to the good proportions of today. Besides the Ogdan mill, the firm has a large flour mill at Preston, Idaho.

Horace E. Peery was also vice president of the Boyle Furniture company and a member of the Ogdan City council from 1907 to 1911, standing high in financial and civic life. He concluded to move his family to California and engage in the orange growing business at Porterville. He purchased an orange grove and began chased an orange grove and began his new labors with earnestness. A strong feature in his resolution to go to California and enter the orange business was a desire to give his children an opportunity to work and develop away from city life and next to the soil in the laudable pursuit of aiding nature in the production of choice fruits.

He was devoted to his family and he was greatly blessed in his family life. In the year 1900 he married Jane Taylor, daughter of Richard J. Taylor and Sarah Farr Taylor. Their union resulted in the birth of three sons and one daughter, Horace Taylor, aged 12; David Harold, aged 10; Richard John, aged 8, and Virginia, aged 6 years. These children, born so well on both sides of the family tree, are a splendid type. Besides the advantage of having a father of sterling qualities they have an ideal mother, quiet in her demeanor but firm and interested in child culture and intelligent in her efforts.

Mrs. Peery aided her husband by instilling qualities into the hearts of their children that make them admired by all who know them. In the sickness of her husband, coming on gradually for months, Mrs. Peery displayed true qualities of a devoted wife that endeared her to all their acquaintances. The trying scenes at her last she endured with fortitude. She has indeed been a true helpmate to Horace Peery's worth and character in her efforts.

Beautiful tributes were brought to the bier at the time of the funeral by those who knew him best.

City Commissioner Samuel Brown, who served with Mr. Peery in the city council, pointed at the casket and said: "There lies an honest man."

Mr. Brown told his hearers how Horace Peery did as much or more than any other man in aiding Ogdan City to obtain the waterworks system. For months Horace Peery labored patiently, yet earnestly, with prudence and wisdom in bringing about the municipal ownership of the waterworks and the people of Ogdan owe a great debt of gratitude to him for his unselfish efforts.

Horace Peery was above all dishonesty in public and private life. He was on the square. If he did not like a condition he spoke plainly and decisively to the interested person. He was modest, as Bishop McQuarrie remarked, and did not sound his own praises. He had ability and energy and worth and his death is a great loss to the community.

In a social way, Horace Peery had a cheerful, attractive, interesting manner that won him many friends, both in Utah and California. The large attendance at the funeral, the many beautiful floral tributes, the kind expressions of all attested his popularity and worth.

It is deplorable that he should have died so young. With his splendid qualities he had an excellent future in this life. In the life beyond the grave a worthy son goes to join a worthy father and brother.

SPIRITUAL LIFE AND ITS PATHWAY OF PROGRESS

Mrs. George Barlett and Miss Louise Pierce furnished the music at the services yesterday morning in the First Presbyterian church.

Speaking on the theme of the "Pathway of Progress in Spiritual Life," Rev. Carver said in part:

Herbert Spencer has a very interesting account of the origin of the conscience. He says it began with compulsion; one great age did good deeds from fear and the next age did them from habit. One great age did right to all those around for fear of personal vengeance or tribal revenge, the next age was prompted to do right because of innate memory. To us, however, this seems to miss the core of the whole question about our conscience. Surely that is a very lame weak conscience that only tell us what not to do and has no word at all about what to do unto others. The old world sacrificed animals and birds to God because of their fear of Him. We today are drawn to God because of our love to Him and to His work. The desire to serve, worship and praise, as that desire is prompted by joy, has supplanted the former attitude of God because driven unto him by fear.

When we read in the Book of Revelation about "The Christ that was sacrificed from the foundation of the world," we find a new unity and a new progression in the world. One has said that the line of this world's progress has been a development of self-sacrifice. In this the writer has come very near in philosophy of history. If you take any other line of progress you will have a hard time indeed to prove any continued development from the past to the present. Plato and Aristotle, as Matheson has said are still the peers in pure intellectual power. The sculptors, painters and builders of the past are still the pattern and despair of the modern mind. The great poems and orations are of other ages. God because driven unto him by fear.

A. E. WEATHERBY IS FOR THE 9 O'CLOCK CLOSING LAW

Editor Standard: Believing that the electors of our city are entitled to a statement over the signatures of the candidates for the several offices to be filled at the coming municipal election, I beg the privilege to make the following declaration regarding my ideas and the policy that would govern my acts in discharging the duties of a commissioner, if elected.

I believe that the building of the dam in South Fork canyon should be carried forward to completion, as in my opinion it is the biggest project that has been promoted for the upbuilding of Ogdan City since it acquired the ownership of our water system.

The building of the dam together with the proper conservation of the city's water rights, will not only assure a sufficient municipal water supply for all time, but will bring under cultivation thousands of acres of what is now arid land just outside the city limits. I know of nothing that would help more than these two things to increase our population to the much desired 50,000 in 1920.

The improving of our streets is also a matter of great importance. I am in favor of adopting some plan that would call for a campaign of systematic street building, that would not be a hardship on our people, but would enable our commissioners to proceed continuously with the work of building streets of a character to which our citizens could point with pride.

Two years ago I favored, and did what I could to maintain our present city ordinance relating to the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquor, including as it does the provision of the closing of saloons at 9 o'clock. The experiment that has been made in the meantime has thoroughly demonstrated the benefits of early closing. Ogdan is not only a cleaner, but a more prosperous city, by reason of its enactment. The banks show an increased amount of deposits and the merchants are carrying less on their books, both of which speak for the prosperity of the people in general. I stand now, as I stood two years ago, for the continuance and honest administration of the present ordinance.

I am in hearty accord with the best efforts of the present administration toward the suppression of gambling and other immoral practices and, if elected commissioner, I will devote my best efforts to the building of a cleaner, a bigger and a more prosperous Ogdan.

(Signed) A. E. WEATHERBY, Candidate for four year term commissioner.

CHANGES MADE IN BISHOPRIC OF THIRD WARD

Following the final session of the annual conference of the Third ward, at which they were unanimously sworn in their new positions, Myron B. Richardson and Frank R. Williams were set apart by the stake presidency, to act as counselors to the present bishop of the ward, Ellis N. Van Dyke. He was also set apart to the position of ward clerk. The change in the bishopric was made necessary by the removal of Counselor Elias S. King from the ward.

The annual conference was in many respects a most auspicious one. The feature of the morning session, held in connection with the Sunday school, was an address by City Commissioner T. Samuel Browning, on the subject of "Moral Responsibility," which was given to the parents and theological classes.

Mr. Browning's talk was clearly and plainly delivered and consisted of an exposition of statistics, regarding the moral life of the community, both past and present, with the causes and remedy for the same. It was listened to with much interest and before the dismissal of the assembly the speaker was invited to address them on a future occasion on the same subject.

On the reassembling of the school, Mr. Browning spoke briefly to the children about the benefits to be derived from attendance at Sunday school.

In addition to the regular business of a sacrament meeting, the afternoon session consisted of the reading of a clear and concise annual report of the ward bishopric, which denoted progress in all organizations and brief talks by Elders H. J. Garver, Joseph Skeen and L. W. Schirmer of the Stake High Council.

All three speakers bore strong testimonies of their faith in the gospel as taught by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and exhorted their hearers to give heed to the same teachings and to uphold and assist the ward officers in the performance of their duties.

At the evening session, John V. Bluth of the stake presidency, presented the names of all the stake and ward officials to the congregation and all were unanimously sustained.

Francis W. Strayford, also of the stake presidency, delivered a strong and impressive doctrinal sermon, in which he expressed a warning of the judgment to come as denoted in the experiences of the people who lived in past dispensations.

Stake President James Wetherpoon also bore a strong testimony of his faith in the divinity of the Mormon doctrines, taking as his text the

Paris Styles in Gowns and Cloaks

Ladies' Outer Apparel and Accessories In Our Autumn Display

Two things we wish to especially emphasize our Autumn display. The first — which is very prominent — is INDIVIDUALITY. More than ever this season has it been our aim to have assortments complete and diversified, but never before have we succeeded so happily as this season. Always have we made it easy for every lady to select her wardrobe with her own needs and preferences clearly in mind but this season it is much easier. This is a wonderful help in this day when to be different in dress is an infallible sign of intelligent selection. The second — is SERVICE.

Our every effort is always bent toward making our service the best we know how. If there is any way we can improve it, we are anxious to find it out and willing to correct it.

Our desire, as always, is to do things better than they were ever done before — to anticipate your needs — to recognize your pleasure and your service as our master and to be satisfied with nothing short of our complete satisfaction. How well we succeed you alone will be the judge.

WHY THE FRENCH FAILED ON CANAL

Paris, Oct. 12.—The admiration with which the French have viewed the completion of the Panama canal has not been entirely without bitterness. Senator Berenger in a statement in the Republique Francaise attributes the failure of France to the political shortcomings of this country.

The Paris Midi today ascribes the failure of the French to build the canal to two evils.

Speculation on the course and the presence on the isthmus of the mosquito which has now been exterminated. It finds comfort in the fact that the canal was planned by French engineers, dug, built and dredged with French machinery, at least in part, and that a French savant made possible through a discovery, the extermination of the dreaded mosquito.

The keenest interest is felt here in Mr. Underwood's clause allowing 5 per cent to imports in American bottoms. The president of the Compagnie Trans-Atlantique Francaise in discussing the question said today: "There is little doubt that if the French government has not already taken some action in the matter it will be compelled to make a protest against this clause which threatens French commercial interests. Should the French be forced to take such measures as will protect French interests. This of course would not be against American shipping, which is now a trifling matter, but the most effective way would be against imports of American goods."

"Discrimination in favor of American vessels will not mean much for several years to come, for I do not believe American ship builders and owners will plunge into what might easily prove to be risky speculations. Meanwhile this discrimination will fret the French and may discourage many of her pending exhibits to the Panama-Pacific exposition."

This French steamship company receives an annual subsidy from the government of between two and seven million francs, varying with the financial condition of the company. The official reason given for this subsidy is that the Compagnie Trans-Atlantique carries the French mails.

Lawrence, Kan., Oct. 13.—Arthur Dudley of Leavenworth, Kan., known on the minstrel stage as Harry Ward, was killed and C. C. Clark of Denver was dangerously injured when their automobile was struck by a Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific passenger train near here today.

SPENCER ADDS TO CRIME LIST

Claims Distinction as Ghoul — Obtains Body By Ruse — Steals Valuables.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Harry Spencer, having practically convinced the police that he is at least a murderer, and the perpetrator of innumerable robberies, claimed added distinction as a ghoul today.

He said that at the time of the Iroquois theatre fire in Chicago, in which 600 lives were lost, he was among the first on the scene and assisted in carrying bodies from the place.

One woman whom he bore out was richly gowned, but burned beyond recognition. Watchfulness of the police prevented him from robbing the body at the time but that night, probably the most profoundly sad in the city's history, he obtained a woman accomplice, went to one of the numerous temporary morgues and "identified" the body as that of the accomplice's sister, "Nellie Skarupa." Skarupa being one of the aliases of Spencer.

By this ruse they obtained possession of the body and had it buried. "We got $1500 worth of jewelry and $1100 in cash off her," said Spencer. "I guess she's still buried under that name."
